The lion is called the 'king of the beast' and is well known symbol by of beauty. Men are frightened by the lion's thundering roar, and impressed by its strength and appearance.

Lions can live in places where the climate is cool or in hot places in semi-desert areas. However, they prefer grassy plains and woodlands. This is because they can find a supply of food in the deer, zebras, antelopes and other hoofed animals that roam the plains.

Long ago, lions were found in Europe, India, the Middle East and much of Northern Africa. As the population of man grew, thousands of lions were killed. Today, most of the lions in the Middle East and Northern Africa are found either in national zoos or parks. Here, they are protected from hunters.

Lions often hunt at night because they can see well in the dark. They also have excellent senses of hearing and smell.
